

Statement from Steve Gag, Laura Gang and Emily Gag

October 8, 2026

We are glad that the City of Boston is implementing meaningful street improvements that will make the intersection where Louisa lost her life safer for every person who walks, bikes, takes transit or drives on that section of Tremont Street.

We're also pleased to see that the City has begun implementing quick build safety improvements on Hyde Park Ave in response to a series of serious and fatal crashes that have taken place in the area in recent years.

While we are heartened by these positive and tangible first steps, the City of Boston must act with more urgency moving forward – both in their rapid response to serious and fatal crashes and in their commitment to advance projects designed to make streets safer to prevent crashes from happening.

On the morning of July 9th, we joined a community of thousands of families in Massachusetts who will forever be changed by the loss of a loved one on an unsafe road. We urge the City to move as quickly as they can to meet their Vision Zero goals, so that no one else has to mourn the loss of a loved one in a preventable, fatal crash again.
